PRESENTATION ON “THE POTENTIAL BENEFITS, IMPACTS, AND OBSTACLES ASSOCIATED WITH TOLLING IN SOUTHEASTERN WISCONSIN”

Chairman Colman called on Mr. Kevin Muhs to give his presentation on “The Potential Benefits, Impacts, and Obstacles Associated with Tolling in Southeastern Wisconsin,” (copy of the presentation is attached to the Official Minutes).
During his presentation the following questions and comments were addressed.

In response to an inquiry by Mr. Bostrom, Mr. Muhs stated that in an electronic tolling environment, if a customer does not have a transponder, a bill for use of the toll road will be sent to the address of the registered license plate, otherwise referred to as pay-by-plate.

Mr. Drew then inquired how diversion rate projections are calculated, Mr. Muhs explained that the Wisconsin Department of Transportation (WisDOT) used the Commission’s travel demand model data as part of the input used to calculate the diversion rates, but that Commission staff are unaware of how the model data were used. If WisDOT moves forward with a Level II or Level III corridor-specific analysis, Commission staff would expect to be involved to ensure that the travel demand model data are used correctly.

Commissioner Shumway inquired whether potential impacts on Wisconsin’s tourism industry had been considered. Mr. Muhs stated that impacts on the tourism industry and communities dependent on tourism were not included in the high-level analysis completed by WisDOT so far, but that a Federal Environmental Impact Statement would be required before tolling could be implemented, and that would include an analysis of impacts on tourism.

In response to Chairman Colman’s inquiry about what the Commission’s role would be if tollways were implemented in Wisconsin, Mr. Muhs stated that if the State moved forward in this Region—which the State may not, as it could choose to study corridors outside of Southeastern Wisconsin—the Commission would take part in the additional studies that would be required, including working with WisDOT to examine a variety of scenarios in regards to tolling technology and the form and structure of the potential tolling system. If the corridor that is chosen for further study is in the Region, the Commission, as the Metropolitan Planning Organization for the Region, would also have to vote to approve Wisconsin’s entrance into the Federal pilot program that currently allows states to study implementing tolling in existing freeway corridors.

Mr. Nelson commented that if Foxconn chooses to locate in the State, the analysis may need to be redone as the results could be significantly different.

In response to Mr. Bostrom’s inquiry regarding the number of corridors that could be chosen for further study if the State wants to enter the Federal pilot program discussed previously, Mr. Muhs stated that under the regulations associated with that pilot program, the entire freeway system in the State or the Region could not move forward for further study. A single corridor, such as I-94, would need to be identified by the State for further study. He noted that if the State decided to move forward with studying variable tolling based on congestion levels, the entire freeway system could be included in a further study. Mr. Bostrom commented that Wisconsin has a number of corridors where further studying tolling may make sense. Mr. Muhs agreed, and noted that the State may be more likely to choose a corridor outside of the Region, as I-90 handles more through-traveling truck traffic and the timing for implementing tolling would be more ideal given the upcoming reconstruction scheduled for I-90 between Madison and the State line.

CORRESPONDENCE/ANNOUNCEMENTS

Chairman Colman announced that the Administrative and Executive Committee Meetings for the month of September have been cancelled. He then asked Mr. Hahn if there was any correspondence or any other announcements.
